There are two breeds of Ameraucana chickens, large fowl and bantams (miniatures). Other than the difference in size both breeds are very similar and the same eight color varieties are recognized in both. They are black, blue, blue wheaten, brown red, buff, silver, wheaten & white. One of the most distinctive characteristics of Ameraucana chickens is that they lay blue eggs. Ameraucanas have other specific requirements with regard to shape, weights, coloring, comb, earlobes, and so on. The American Poultry Association's (APA) Standard of Perfection and the American Bantam Association's (ABA) Bantam Standard outline the breed and variety characteristics. They are the official guides to all standard bred poultry.

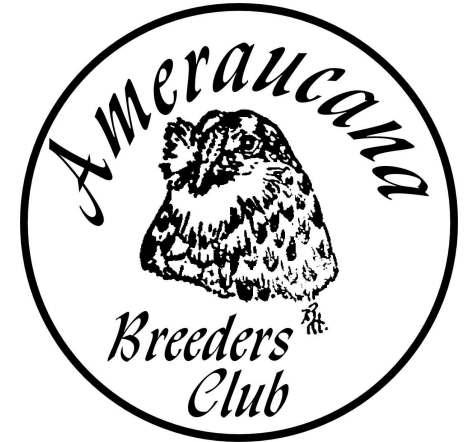

"The purpose of the Ameraucana Breeders Club is to encourage the continued improvement of Ameraucana bantams and large fowl through breeding, exhibition, and dissemination of relevant information."

Many commercial hatcheries and individuals misrepresent the chickens they sell, claiming they are Ameraucanas and/or Araucanas. Often they are offering "Easter Egg" chickens, that may lay blue eggs, like Ameraucanas and Araucanas, but are really mixed breeds and not recognized by the APA or ABA. Before making a purchase remember the adage "buyer beware".
